TO AROUSE COUNTRY

President's Trip Down Missis- sippi of Vital Import.

NATIONAL CONGRESS TO ACT

Big National Rivers and Harbors Congress to Take Full Advantage of Impetus Given by Roosevelt's History-Making Waterway Trip.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—President Roosevelt's journey down the historic Mississippi River, his noteworthy addresses at Keokuk, St. Louis and his hearty endorsement of waterway development undoubtedly have made a deep impression on the American people.

That the trip will lend an impetus to consideration of the problem that is confronting the nation is beyond question. It will result without doubt in spurring the country into activity in providing for a system of transportation that will supplement the railroads, already overcrowded and incapable of handling the immense increase in traffic.

This activity will be given added impetus in December, just on the eve of the assembling of the National Congress by the annual convention of the National Congress for the annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. Captain J. F. Ellison, of Cincinnati, its secretary and treasurer, has just completed arrangements here for the meeting on December 4, 5 and 6. The convention will be held in the great ballroom of the New Willard hotel, which has been the scene of many important conventions and brilliant social events. It was found necessary to engage the largest hall in the District of Columbia because of the promised attendance, delegates from every state in the union having already signified their intention of being present.

The convention will be one of the most important of its kind ever held in the United States. Invitations to address the delegates have been issued to members of the Cabinet leaders on the floor of the Senate and House governors of many states and men prominent in business life, and already acceptances are beginning to pour in. There will be almost as many notables present as are to be found at a national political convention.

The meeting will be the fourth annual convention of the organization. For seven years the National Rivers and Harbors Congress has worked to arouse the public to the necessity for developing the waterways of the United States. Several years ago it foresaw the congestion of freight traffic that last winter practically isolated the northwest and left scores of committees to freeze because of the lack of cars to carry coal to them. At that time the prophecy was scouted. Today the public is awakening to the need for more means of communication, and especially for a system of transportation that will relieve the railroads of the heavier classes of freight.

In his speech at Keokuk President Roosevelt spoke plainly and emphatically of his interest in and endorsement of the cause for which the organization is working. In discussing the matter of improving the rivers he said:

"I feel that we cannot have too many railroads, and that in addition to the iron highroads of our railway system we should also utilize the great river highways which have been given us by nature. From a variety of causes these highways in many parts of the country have been almost abandoned. This is not healthy. Our people, and especially the representatives of the people in the National Congress, should give their most careful attention to this subject. We should be prepared to put the nation collectively back of the movement to improve them for the nation's use. Our knowledge at this time is not such as to permit me to go into details, or to say definitely just what the nation should do; but most assuredly our great navigable rivers are national assets. Just as much as our great seacoast harbors should be fitted to receive in safety the largest vessels of the merchant fleets of the world, so by deepening and otherwise our rivers should be fitted to bear their part in the movement of our merchandise."

It is to bring these facts to the attention of the people and the Congress of the United States that the National Rivers and Harbors Congress is working. It has had the heartiest endorsement of the President before, and the administration's approval will not be lacking at the convention to be held in December.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

The kidneys are essential organs for keeping the body free from impurities. If they should fail to work death would ensue in very short time. Inflammation or irritation caused by some feminine derangement may spread to some extent to the kidneys and affect them. The cause can be so far removed by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that the trouble will disappear.
